

POETRY.

The following beautiful lines would do credit to the pen of Addison or Pope.—U. S. Telegraph.

TO MR J. E. M. H.—Y. OF BALTIMORE, ON THE DEATH OF HIS MOTHER.

Can this be death?
The yielding up a transitory breath—
Seeking a tranquil for a stormy clime—
Pleasure for pain—eternity for time—
The kingdom where creation's birth began;
And heaven's sweet harp for Earth and God for man?
No! 'tis not death.

And what is death?
In dark despair to yield th' unwilling breath—
To see with bursting eye the charnel ope—
The past a curse—the future without hope—
Beside the bed the ghost of murdered time,
Lending, with ghastly hand, accusing time?
Ah! that is death.

Then 'tis not death
My friend, that closed thy pious mother's breath,
"Twas Heaven, its meed of glory to bestow,
That call'd her soul above from ills below.
Death's 'sin's wages: thus the Saviour said;
And she was sinless: can she then be dead?
No! 'tis not death.

Duchess of Cleveland—The imperious and turgid Duchess of Cleveland, the famous—or rather infamous—mistress of Charles II. ruled that profligate monarch with a rod of iron. Nor did she alone feel the effects of her sway. His people suffered from her unbounded extravagance, and his weak and wicked indulgence of her humors. Her rapacity was insatiable. Besides a grant of 5322 pounds a year out of the post office, to her and her heirs, she had 20,000 a year out of the customs. What sums were occasionally paid her out of the revenues of Ireland cannot be ascertained: besides this income, immense in those days, she had at different times, gifts in money, jewels, and plate, to an incredible amount, and this at the time when the king's household servants were cursing him because they had not bread to eat, and he himself wanted linen, and was stinted in writing paper.

She caused the disgrace and banishment of the great Lord Chancellor, Clarendon, the earliest and best friend of her father, because he refused to put the seal of office to some grant of a place which he had disposed of, saying he thought "the woman would sell every thing shortly;" which being repeated to her, she sent to tell him, "that she had disposed of this place, and did not doubt in a little time to dispose of his." She was as good as her word. When he returned from Whitehall, after resigning the seals, she jumped out of bed in her night dress, to look down upon him as he passed, and stood upon her balcony, abusing him loudly and in the coarsest terms her vulgar malice could suggest.

When she quarrelled with the great Duke of Ormond, who had offended her in many ways, but chiefly by refusing to sanction her enormous drains on the treasury, she reviled him, swore at him, and finally told him "she hoped to see him hanged." To this the duke replied with a grave humor, becoming his character, that "far from wishing her ladyship's days shortened in return, his greatest desire was to see her grow old."

This infamous woman finally died, at the age of about sixty, miserable, contemned, and neglected; leaving a name, as Mrs Jameson justly says, more fitted to "point a moral" than "adorn a tale."—M. Y. Transcript.

From the New York Star.

We have seldom read in the fugitive productions of our newspapers, essays more sprightly and classical in their style than a series of interesting letters being published in the Natchez "Courier & Journal," under the title of "Letters from Louisiana and Mississippi by a Yankee," dated at Natchez, No. VI. contains some amusing speculations on the migratory character of the Americans, and contends that Spurzheim saw in the old Atlantic states only the non-migratory portion of our countrymen, but that if he had gone to the west he would have discovered the "organ of migrativeness."

He thus beautifully speaks of the character of the population:

"The predominancy of the male population in the countless villages that are dotting the great western valley, rising up amidst the forests one after another, as stars come out at evening, and almost as rapidly successive, is a necessary consequence of the natural laws of migration. In the old Atlantic and New England states, the sons as they successively grow up to manhood, take the paternal blessing, and their little patrimony, often all easily packed and carried in a knapsack, but often in their heads, and bend their way to the 'great west,' to seek their fortunes, with them, no nursery tale, but a stern and hard earned reality; there they struggle—prosper or fail—with blighted hopes go down to early graves or building a fire-side of their own, gather around it sons, who in their declining years, shall, in their turn, go forth from the paternal roof to seek beyond the mountains of the Pacific shore, a name, a fire-side, and a home of their own. And such is human life."

Alluding to the greater degree of refinement that now exists in Natchez, from the more frequent practice of marrying, the cultivation of domestic arts, and the substitution of female society for the gambling and bacchanalian revels and duelling habits growing out of them, for which this place was a long time so famous, the writer says—

"The society of Natchez now is not surpassed by any in America—originally, and thereina unlike most western cities composed of intelligent and well educated young men, assembled from every Atlantic state, but principally from New England and Virginia, it has advanced in a degree proportionate to its original powers. English and Irish gentlemen of family and fortune have here sought and found a home—while the gentilhomme of sunny France, and the dark-browed Don of "old Castile," dwell upon the green hills that recede gently undulating from the city, or find in their valleys a stranger's unmarbled and unhonoured grave.

Many of the wealthiest planters are lodged wretchedly—on a splendid seaboard not unfrequently concealing an ill-white-washed beam—a gorgeous Brussels carpet laid over a rough plank floor—while uncouth rafters; in ludicrous contrast to the splendor they look down upon—strung across the ceiling. These discrepancies, however, always characteristic of a new country, are rapidly disappearing—and another generation will be lodged if not like princes, at least like independent American gentlemen."

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1835.

We find it more convenient to insert our Postscript in the Third Page, where it will, generally, be found.

Washington, January 28.

There is now every prospect that the balance of the session will be a very stormy one. The debate in the Senate, yesterday and to-day, have been marked with a degree of heat and zeal only paralleled by the fervor which marked the last session when the deposit question was under consideration. The debate was elicited by the report of the Post Office Committee, presented yesterday morning, in reading which nearly two days were consumed! Then followed Mr Grundy's minority report, in reading which two hours only were spent. "By the beard of Mahomet, but every thing is done upon a prodigious great scale here." The country is degenerating into a pure unmitigated logocracy, in which every thing is to be carried vi et lingua. I expressed the opinion to you in my last, that the majority report was little more than a reiteration of the report of last year, and have seen nothing since to change my opinion of it.

The debate which ensued upon it, however, was one of the most skilful manoeuvres that I have ever seen played off. You know the nomination of Mr Taney has been before the Senate for some time as Judge of the Supreme Court. There is no doubt that the majority in that body are very anxious to reject the nomination, if the country will sustain them, and the measure will be a final disposition of that gentleman. But never did a set of men experience a greater conflict between their dispositions and their fears than they do.

They have been exerting every means both direct and indirect to ascertain, not whether the people will refuse to sustain them in the rejection, for on that subject they have no doubt, but what degree of odium and indignation will be excited by it. I think it is still uncertain what course they will ultimately take in the matter, but there can be no doubt that this two days' debate, or in other words the storm they have raised was a designed, preconcerted movement between those spirits of opposite factions, Ewing, Southard, Preston and Calhoun for the purpose of withdrawing and diverting the public eye from their executive movements.

The object is to turn the people off upon a wrong scent, while they run late, a second time, the object of their hate. And yet I should not be surprised if Mr Taney should be confirmed, because these measures are rather to be considered as precautionary and designed for the worst. But if he should be confirmed, it will only be making a merit of necessity, well knowing that if they refuse it now, the confirmation will ultimately take place. I say ultimately, for it cannot be supposed for a moment, that the patriotic executive of this nation would see the known opinion of the people trampled upon and despised, and not call together a Senate which after the 4th of March would pay greater respect to their sovereign will. In view of this course being pursued by the President, in case they are continuacious, it is still doubted what disposition they will make of the nomination.

The course of the debate I cannot undertake to describe—your readers will see it published, and can judge for themselves. But I was amused with the alternate tone of despondency and spirit of some of the opposition. Mr Preston admitted he had been "beaten, routed, horsed, footed and dragons," and therefore this exhibition was not for the purpose of the country—aye—longer. His adversary, Mr Mangum, however, a lad to whom a kidney, who has been invited to resign by his State, and who has been spoken of for the Presidency! God save the mark! denied that he had been beaten, and was resolved he would not stay beaten—that all the opposition yet had to do, to ensure triumphant success, was to perform their duty faithfully. To this Judge Grundy replied in his peculiar caustic way, and so good-humored a demolition of an adversary was worth a ride from Boston to witness. He said that Mr Mangum's situation reminded him of a man in the western country, who was knocked about so often that he did not know when he was whipped, and he was glad, as Mr Preston had resigned the command, that so gallant a leader as Mr Mangum, who could not tell when he was whipped, had taken it, and begged to offer him in some ammunition in case he wanted it. This most cutting sally rendered Mr M. hors du combat, produced a general laugh, ended the debate, and the question was taken.

Trouble, Trouble.—The election of Governor Davis, as U. S. Senator, on the part of the House of Representatives, has created some uneasiness, and it is whispered that the Senate will not concur. The following is copied from the Centinel of Saturday:—

"The Atlas says, 'the election of John Davis, is hailed with joy by every true friend of Whig principles.' Now we undertake to pronounce this to be sheer misrepresentation; there is not the least warranty for the assertion: it would be difficult to embrace more of inaccurate information, than is contained in those two lines. So far from the choice being hailed with joy by every Whig, it has been almost universally repudiated by those who are in favor of the predominance of Whig principles, and we appeal with confidence in support of our position, to the whole community,—both in city and country. Ask any ten unprejudiced Whigs in any part of the State, what they think of the action of the House, and none of them will say decidedly, that it was indecorous in the extreme. We have conversed with gentlemen from the opposite sections of the State, and they all agree that the attempt to remove Gov. Davis from his present station, will meet with the general disapprobation of the Whig party. On the other hand, the choice of the House was sustained by the Jackson members, and it will be hailed with joy—triumphant joy by the whole Jackson party of the State. Gentlemen may indeed say, we are glad of the support of the Jackson members. We join in saying that we are glad to receive Jackson votes in any judicious measure, but the leaders of that party are not destitute of political sagacity, and when we see our opponents over anxious for a measure, which they deem important towards overthrowing our party, we should take counsel from their mischievous movements."

The Hon. Joseph Healy has been nominated a candidate for Governor by the federalists of New Hampshire, vice Andrew Pierce, who declined the nomination.

If the democracy of Massachusetts have much to do before they can secure the political ascendancy which their principles deserve, it is a forcible reason why they should not fold their arms in inactivity, and suffer their aristocratic opponents to rule the State without opposition. Calling upon Hercules, without putting our own shoulders to the wheel, is mere boy's play, and should be at once discarded. We trust there are no democrats who do not expect one day to see a republican majority in this Commonwealth—none who would forsake their principles because they are unpopular here—and none who are unwilling to unite in a well directed effort to free the State from that federal bondage whose perpetuity would be fatal to the existence of liberal principles. Because we have been unsuccessful for years in succession—because we have not carried as by a coup de main, the strongest citadel of federalism, we should not despair, but rather labor with renewed activity for that victory which must, and will, ultimately crown our efforts. Aside from what we owe ourselves, it is due to the democracy of the nation, and to the principles of that democracy, that we labor to strengthen the one by disseminating the other. States in reality as uncongenial to the growth of republican principles as Massachusetts, have been revolutionized by industrious application. The same may be done here—and, unless we mistake the "signs of the times," the people at large are already beginning to feel the weight of the heavy burthens which have been put upon their backs by those who were chosen to be their servants, but have aspired to become their masters. A more favorable time for a thorough and efficient organization of the democratic party, has not presented itself for years, and should not be suffered to pass without the adoption of such measures as will, if persevered in, bring this ancient Commonwealth once more into the democratic fold. A spirit of inquiry is now abroad among the people, which must be fatal to the political prospects of their oppressors—let us nurture it then, with careful attention, and not suffer it to be smothered by the intrigues of officious demagogues, who hope to live and fatten upon the violated rights of an abused and insulted people.

The Mint.—It appears from the official report of the Director of the Mint—just printed for Congress, that the coinage effected at that establishment within the last year, amounts to $7,388,423; comprising $3,954,270 in gold coins; $3,415,001 in silver; $19,151 in copper; and consisting of 11,673,643 pieces of coin. "The deposits of gold within the last year have amounted to $4,389,000, of which about $1,067,000 consisted of coins of the United States, issued previously to the act of 12th of June, establishing a new ratio of gold to silver: about $898,000 were derived from the gold regions of the United States; $225,000 from Mexico, South America, and the West Indies; $2,180,000 from Europe; $12,000 from Africa, and $9,000 from sources not ascertained. In anticipation of a change in the legal valuation of gold, it had been considered proper to suspend the coinage of all deposits received after the 1st June. Previously to this period, the sum of $383,545 had been coined, so that, of the above amount of the gold coinage for the past year, $3,570,725 consist of coins of the new standard. The amount, however, is the result of the operations of the mint during only five months of the year, corresponding to an amount, for a full year, of about 8 1-2 millions in gold. Within the same period, the coinage of silver was regularly maintained at the average of $12,500,000. "The amount of gold in the vaults of the mint on the 1st August was $468,500. The amount now remaining in the mint uncoined is $435,000; no part of which was deposited earlier than the 9th December. The amount of silver remaining in our vaults for coinage, is, in round numbers, $475,000; no part of which was deposited earlier than the 20th November.

Com. Elliott.—The New York Times, in copying from this paper a summary of the correspondence between Com. Elliott and other gentlemen, growing out of the late trial of Lt. Babbitt (which summary, by the way, we have frequently seen credited to Bicknell's Reporter), makes the following remarks upon the subject:—

"It is asserted, and it is probably true, that a majority of the officers of both navy and army, so far as they take interest in politics at all, are inclined to favor what is now the opposition party. Whether this be so or not, it would seem that it is dangerous for one of them to uphold republican principles, and that if he is at all prominent, his doing so draws upon him unparagoned hostility and persecution. The case of Commodore Elliott, which is far from being the only one of the kind, affords a striking illustration of this. The service does not boast a more gallant officer, nor truer patriot, but his attachment to the administration, for there could be no other cause, has subjected him to a course of such unmerited abuse and persecution as has been seen in no other case since the organization of the navy."

The Boston Advocate, in alluding to the debate upon Corporations, which took place in the House of Representatives on Friday, says:—

"Every body fell upon Mr Rantoul, who had ventured to place himself before the supremacy of Corporations. He is quite a young man, and sustains himself well, but there seems to be hardly a fair display of generosity in making him the sole point of attack, as if to put him down would put up Corporations. We hope that the substantial yeomanry will sustain him."

A new actor, the New York Times says, will make his appearance in that city about the middle of this month. His readings have been heard by a great many competent judges, and their opinions are given in the warmest strain of eulogy. The highest expectations are entertained. His figure, features and voice, are said to be admirably adapted to his profession, and his talents are considered to be of the first order.

The famed Celeste, who astonished the Americans five years ago, and since then the Parisians, the English, the Irish, Daniel O'Connell among the rest, and other people too numerous to mention, makes her appearance to-night at the Tremont.

Warren Theatre.—The indefatigable proprietor of this flourishing establishment, has made arrangements for producing, this evening, Mr Knowles's latest drama—the Beggars of Bethnal Green—in a very effective style.

The Courier and Enquirer was the only New York paper received by Saturday's Mail. The Mail did not arrive until 4 o'clock on Sunday morning. It furnished no Washington papers.

VERY LATE FROM EUROPE.

By the arrival at New York of the packet ship Napoleon, London dates to the 24th December, and Liverpool to the 26th, have been received. And by the subsequent arrival at the same port of the ship United States, Capt. Holdrege, Liverpool papers to the 2d ultimo, have also been received. The Napoleon brought despatches for Government, which were immediately forwarded by the southern mail.

The packet ship France, probably, had not arrived at Havre as soon as there was reason to expect. The last Paris dates received in London are of the 30th December, and they make no allusion whatever to our treaty of indemnity.

The accounts from Spain represent the late successes of Mina as much more decisive than we had at first reason to believe. The Madrid papers say that the Pretender will not again be able to collect under his banners any considerable force.

There is much talk of warlike preparations in Holland against Belgium.

Dissolution of Parliament.—The Gazette of Tuesday contains a royal proclamation, declaring the present Parliament, which stood prorogued to the 15th inst. dissolved and directing the writs for a new Parliament to be issued forthwith, and returnable on Thursday, the 19th Feb. The election of the sixteen representative peers of Scotland is fixed for the 10th of Feb. at Edinburgh. The proclamation is dated the 29th December.

The following additional appointments have been announced:—

The Earl of Haddington, formerly Lord Binning, to be Lord Lieutenant of Ireland—Viscount Castlereagh to be Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household, in room of the Earl of Belfast, resigned—Viscount Hereford, Captain of his Majesty's honorable corps of gentlemen at arms, in the room of Lord Foley, resigned—the Hon. Henry Lowry Corry, Controller of his Majesty's household, vice the Right Hon. Lord Robert Grosvenor, resigned—George, Earl of Chesterfield, to be Master of his Majesty's Buck Hounds, vice the Earl of Litchfield, resigned.

Portugal.—Under date of Lisbon, Dec. 18, we have the Queen's speech on the Prorogation of the chambers.

MARKETS.

Liverpool, Dec. 27, 1834.—The import of the week is 1841 bags, more, 18,404 from the United States, 912 from Bahia, and 525 from the West Indies. The sales of the week are 7860 bags. Prices have declined 1d to 4d per lb this week.

Stock of Cotton in the Port of Liverpool, viz:—

	Dec. 31, 1834.	Dec. 31, 1833.
American,	105,940	110,500
Brazil,	9720	47,280
W. Indies, &c.	5020	14,574
Egyptian,	1120	6914
East India,	25,510	46,398

January 1.—The sales since Friday have amounted to 10,000 bags. Prices have advanced 3d per lb. The import since Friday has been 6000 bags, all American Cotton. The comparative small quantity to be met with, considerable parcels of Havana have been disposed of since our last. The private business of the week is reported to consist of about 2000 boxes white and yellow, the former at 51s 6d a 32s 6d, and the latter at 28s 6d a 25s 6d per cwt. The anxiety to purchase has also been manifested in Brazil Sugar, and 250 chests white Rio at 29s, with 13 lbs tare, and 200 chests brown Bahia at 24 to 25s per cwt. The market is becoming scarce, and holders are asking higher prices. Coffee—The transactions in Ceylon privately and publicly do not exceed 500 bags, and in conformity to the prices paid we reduce our quotations: Fair ordinary may be quoted at 51s to 53s; of St Domingo and Brazil, prices are unvaried, and as they have been brought forward by public sale; the few parcels sold privately have been at 51s 6d for 100 bags of good coffee Brazil; and 50s for fair St Domingo.

London, Dec. 31.—The slight fluctuation of the day in Consols has been towards the side of improvement, the last price being 93½ to 2, which is 1 better than yesterday; other descriptions are totally unvaried.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, Saturday, January 31.—The petition of proprietors of Pews in Park Street Church, presented to the Committee on Pews, in concurrence.

Mr Hudson presented the petition of the Boston and Providence Rail Road Corporation, for variation of the route of their Branch Road, and for other powers; referred to the Committee on Railways and Lands; sent down for concurrence. Adjourned.

In the House of Representatives. Ordered, that the Committee on Education inquire into the expediency of providing by law for the meeting and organization of school committees.

Petition of Wm. Lane and 84 others of Norton, in aid of the petition of Wm. Vans, referred.

The Committee on the Judiciary reported that it is inexpedient to Legislate on the subject of repealing the law requiring the service of writs on towns in case of prosecution. A short discussion arose on the acceptance of this report; it was finally re-committed. Petition of Thomas W. Lyon and 142 others of Northfield, for repeal of the License laws; County Estimates for the County of Bristol; referred.

Bill reported in addition to an act to establish the State Lunatic Hospital; passed to a second reading. Bill to Incorporate the Worcester House Company came down from the Senate, was read, and the House refused it a second reading. Mr Everett of Boston, moved a reconsideration of the vote. Mr Everett's motion was advocated by Messrs. Keyes of Concord, and Greene of Boston. Mr Marsh considered it an insult to the dignity of the Senate, to treat a bill in such a manner, even to refuse to give it a second reading, when they (the House) were wholly unacquainted with the merits of the bill. Mr Chapman thought it wrong to stop a bill in its passage from a first to a second reading. A member of the House who could give all necessary information as to the merits of the bill, was absent. He hoped the House would deliberate on the matter before they came to a final decision. He moved that the motion to re-consider should be laid on the table. Mr Lee was also in favor of a re-consideration. Mr Foster of Worcester, thought it was most ungenerous to attack a bill, in such a manner, it was virtually an attack on an old established precedent, and done too when most of the friends of the Bill were absent, under the late reconsideration, if no other he hoped the motion to re-consider would prevail. Mr Brigham of Worcester, considered it contrary to all the rules of Legislation to stop a bill on its passage from a first to a second reading; such a disposition of any Bill would be at war with the very spirit of the Constitution. Every petitioner had a right to a hearing in the House, and a great portion of the members were unacquainted with the merits of the Bill before them, and of course had given it no hearing at all. Messrs. Marsh and Kinnicut, were of corresponding opinions. On motion of Mr Everett, the vote was reconsidered; passed to a second reading, on motion of Mr Keyes, and ordered to be printed.

On motion of Mr Cook of Boston, the petition of Benedict Fenwick was taken from the table and referred to Messrs. Forbes of Northampton, Field of Charlestown, Covley of Granville, Marcy of Southbridge, and Baxter of Nantucket.

The discussion on the passage of the Bill to incorporate the Boyden Iron Company was resumed by Mr Hastings of Boston, and by him continued till the House adjourned.—Merc.

The dome of a new building now being erected on the Western Avenue, near Braman's Bath, was blown in, about 12 o'clock last night. The building is owned by Mr Towle, riding master, and is to be occupied by the building and stock is estimated at about $200.—Merc.

The U. S. ship Cyane, lying outside of the sloop of war Warren, at the Navy Yard, filled with water on the 26th inst., and sunk.—Philadelphia paper.

POLICE COURT.

A sample of a good, easy husband.—The captain of the West watch, having discovered that the midnight dancing assemblies, so common on the Hill, in the olden time, were gradually reviving, planned a ruse de guerre for the detection and capture of the Lady Patronesses of one of them. He induced one of his men, most resembling a "marine monster," to disguise himself like a sailor, and, with pumps on his feet, and a bandanna waving in his hand, to join the revelry of the modern "Corinthia's syren wantons." The Charley, on the qui vive for an adventure, and relishing the scheme, repaired to one of the motley rendezvous, and, being mistaken, as many worse men are, for what he seemed to be, was warmly welcomed into the establishment. At the entrance, he was met and surrounded by three copartnership dames, who proceeded at once to initiate him into the pleasures and mysteries of their temple, where "they lived, this precious three,

With just as little sense or notion
Of what the world calls decency,
As hath the sea-calf in the ocean."

The practical part of Charley's gay entertainment commenced by a joint solicitation from the fair trio, that he should liquidate his footing into their "good society," which customary requisition being liberally responded to by him, two of the ladies reeled off, and committed him to the protection of Mrs Sophy Beetle, who directed a black fiddler to scrape up a jig, and gave out the watchword of the night—

"On with the dance—let joy be unconfined,
No sleep till morn, when youth and beauty meet,
To chase the glowing hours with flying feet."

Then, fondly throwing her arm around his neck, she whirled him round the hall, and through the bewildering mazes of a gallopade, and by kissing, curtesying, and coquetting, endeavored to enslave his heart, and betray him into a confession of the power of her veteran charms. In spite of her caresses, however, he remained incombustible, and obstinately insensible to her favors, and instead of yielding to her blandishments, he decoyed her to the door, where some brother Charlies were laying in ambush, and, springing like wolves upon their prey, ruthlessly seized her by the waist, and bore her off, in spite of her outcries and struggles, to jail. In the extremity of her woe and rage, she made the very pavements quiver, and the house-tops tremble with the hurricane of wrath that she poured upon the head of the traitor, who had betrayed her, not with a kiss, but by taking one, into the hands of her enemies. The fierce terms of her denunciation, as terse as they were foul, upon the false-heartedness of her arch-deceiver, ought neither to be imagined nor expressed, but must remain forever graven on the hearts of the select few, who conducted her to the prison. The burthen of them, however, was, "that there is nothing but villany in man"—a disagreeable, but incontestible truth, that was never seriously doubted by man, woman, or even beast, "since first the flight of years began."

When brought into Court, dressed, as she was, "negligently grand," she was at once recognized as the redoubtable, incorrigible and metinguishable flame of sin who had polluted thirteen unavailing voyages to the house of correction, for the benefit of her morals, under the imposing and aristocratic cognomen of Sophia De Wolf. The change of this high-sounding title to the plebeian appellation of Sophy Beetle, led to a dialogue between her ladyship and his honor, as to the cause of this "sinking in poetry."

Magis.—How happens it, that your name is Beetle?

Mrs Beetle.—With heaven's blessing, and we are both spared to see the day, it will be five years the 20th of next September, since I was married in lawful wedlock to Mr Beetle.

Magis.—You appear to be rather old, to be hugging up a young sailor, and he not a very handsome one neither. [The Charley did not look very handsome, when he heard this judicial opinion upon his personal beauty.] Where is your husband?

A voice from the crowd.—Here I be; and if your honor could only forgive her, this time, I'll take her right out of town, and she shall never come back again.

Upon this unexpected answer, all eyes were directed to a little porpoise-faced animal, done up in duck trews and a flannel shirt, with a nose like an inverted lid of a cream-cup, who had crowded up among the "nobs," and whose appearance indicated him to be "One of those kinds that round us tread,

With just enough offense to see
The noon day sun that's o'er his head."

Magis.—You her husband! What do you think of her kissing sailors?

Mr Beetle.—Oh, your honor, you know I didn't see her kiss him.

At this moment, poor Beetle would have been an excellent study for some aspiring young Roscius, who wished to astonish the groundlings with Othello's passionate burst—so often spoken, but never, no never so "looked," so acted before—

"I saw it not, thought it not, it harmed not me;
I slept the night as well, was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on my lips.
He that's robbed, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know it, and he's not robbed at all."

After eyeing the suppliant petitioner a few seconds with astonishment, his honor announced a sentence of separation between the "twain of one flesh," for six months, and she was instantly remanded to the lock-up, whither the fixed and glaring eyes of her husband, stupefied with sorrow, followed her, with the same expressive silence, with which Julia regards the fragments of Clifford's letter, so spitefully destroyed by Master Walter.

Accidents.—Mr George West of this village, with Mr Samuel Osgood, attempted to pass on our river, with a horse and wagon, to Newburyport, on Tuesday evening last, to procure a load of fresh fish for this market. They had proceeded but about three quarters of a mile when the ice gave way and all were plunged into the water. The horse and wagon were lost, and the men very narrowly escaped a similar fate.

We learn that on the same evening a similar accident occurred near the Rocks village in this town. A person attempting to cross the river with a horse and wagon, fell through the ice—the horse and wagon were lost, but the driver and principal part of the loading were saved.—Haverhill Banner.

Fire.—The house of Mr J. M. Jones, in Federal street, came near being burnt on Saturday evening, by some clothes taking fire, probably from a spark snuffing on them as they were hanging before the fire in the parlor, while the family were up stairs with a sick child. The fire was discovered by the neighbors just in season to save the house and furniture, with the exception of the chairs, a carpet and rug.—Eve. Gaz.
